UNITED NATIONS WAR CRIMES COMMISSION
1943 - 1949

PAG-3/Rev. 1, 1987
INTRODUCTION

HISTORY AND ORGANIZATION

The United Nations War Crimes Commission \(^1\) was established on 20 October 1943 by a meeting of Government representatives of seventeen of the Allied Nations, \(^2\) including all of the major powers except the U.S.S.R. \(^3\) at the Foreign Office in London. The first official meeting was held on 11 January 1944, and the Commission continued its work actively until the end of March 1948.

The Commission engaged in formulating and implementing general measures necessary to ensure the detection, apprehension, trial and punishment of persons accused of war crimes. It also performed valuable advisory functions in connection with the development of principles of international law and planning for international tribunals. Its terms of reference were as follows:

(i) To collect, investigate and record evidence of war crimes, identifying where possible the individuals responsible.

(ii) To report to the Government concerned cases where the material available appeared to disclose a prima facie case.

(iii) To act as a Committee of Legal Experts charged with advising the Governments concerned upon matters of a technical nature, such as the sort of tribunals to be employed in the trial of war criminals, the law to be applied, the procedure to be adopted and the rules of evidence to be followed.

\(^1\) For a more detailed account of the organizational structure and the operating procedures of the UNWCC see History of the United Nations War Crimes Commission and the Development of the Laws of War, compiled by the UNWCC (London, His Majesty's Stationery Officer, 1948).

\(^2\) Australia, Belgium, Canada, China, Czechoslovakia, France, Greece, India, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Poland, Union of South Africa, United Kingdom, United States, Yugoslavia. South Africa was only involved in the setting up of the Commission; subsequently, it did not participate in its workings. Denmark joined the Commission as a full member in July 1945. Apart from these two changes the composition of the Commission did not change during its lifetime.

\(^3\) The Soviet Union did not become a member, and therefore, did not submit any charges.
In carrying out the function under (ii) the Commission was assisted by National Offices established by each of the constituent members. Formal charges against alleged or suspected war criminals were submitted to the Commission by the National Offices, along with the supporting data and a description of evidence available. It was then the responsibility of the Commission to determine whether there appeared to be sufficient evidence to warrant the listing of persons charged as criminals in order that they might be detained and prosecuted by the member governments. In the performance of this function the Commission examined charges involving approximately 37,000 individuals.

The War Crimes Commission took no part in the detention of persons listed, or in the prosecution of the cases.

The function of the Commission under (iii) was to formulate recommendations for the guidance of governments. Through a number of recommendations the Commission influenced the development of international law in such questions as jurisdiction, extradition, belligerent occupation, personal responsibility for acts of State, the criminality of aggressive war and the protection of human rights of civil populations against violations by their own governments. The law-reporting activities of the Commission are a valuable source of information on State practice regarding the repression of crimes against peace, war crimes and crimes against humanity, and constituted an important preliminary step in the development and codification of these branches of international law.

When the International Military Tribunals at Nuremberg and Tokyo, as well as the municipal and occupation courts of its member governments, started to function and trials of war criminals were actually being conducted on a considerable scale, the Commission made arrangements for the collection and examination of the records of these trials.

The Commission's first Chairman was Sir Cecil Hurst of the United Kingdom who was followed in January 1945 by Lord Wright of Durley, Australia's representative in the Commission. The post of Secretary-General was held originally by Hugh McKinnon Wood; in November 1945, Col. G.A. Ledingham succeeded him.

The Commission established three main committees:

Committee I, the Committee on Facts and Evidence, was to examine the charges filed by the member governments (National Offices) and to prepare and issue lists of war criminals for the different apprehending authorities in order that they might take the necessary action.
Committee II, was concerned with "Enforcement", a term which comprised all measures considered necessary to ensure the detection, apprehension, trial and punishment of persons guilty of or responsible for war crimes. The recommendations of this Committee influenced not only the creation of the Nuremberg International Military Tribunal, but also the establishment of the many other international and inter-allied military tribunals including the International Military Tribunal for the Far East. In the course of time the duties of Committee II were assumed either by Committee I or Committee III.

Committee III, the Legal Committee, was to advise on legal questions. Owing to the significance of many of the legal questions which were subsequently examined, the Commission's advisory function tended, in the course of time, to exceed in importance its original task of investigation.

Questions of substantive law and particular charges brought before the Commission by the National Offices ranged from the definition of a war crime, superior orders, and military necessity, to usurpation of sovereignty.

In order to deal with Far Eastern problems, the Commission adopted a proposal by the Chinese Ambassador to establish a Far Eastern and Pacific Sub-Commission in Chungking (eventually moved to Nanking) as a branch of the UNWCC. It held its inaugural meeting on 29 November 1944. The Sub-Commission set up two sub-committees, a Finance Committee and a Committee on Facts and Evidence. The minutes of its meetings were regularly transmitted to the main Commission in London. Up to March 1947 it had held 38 meetings.

Other committees of the main Commission were the Far Eastern Committee, the Public Relations Committee, the Finance Committee, the Executive Committee and the Legal Publications Committee.

In May 1944 the Commission established a Research Office charged with the task of tracing some of the most notorious forms of systematized war crimes to their source, i.e. to compile documentary evidence on the German authorities and departmental chiefs responsible for directing organisations under which war crimes were committed. Thus, in close collaboration with the National Offices, prima facie cases against leading German officials were often established on the basis of a single decree or proclamation published in the German-controlled press of an occupied territory. Another part of the Research Office's work consisted in meeting requests for information and to arrange for the publications of the Commission.
The records of the War Crimes Commission in the United Nations Archives consist of: minutes, documents and reports of the Commission and its Committees, the Research Office, and the Far Eastern and Pacific Sub-Commission; periodical lists of War Criminals, Suspects, Witnesses (including approximately 37,000 names) and related material of the main Commission and of the Far Eastern and Pacific Sub-Commission; and correspondence, mainly with various National Offices. The more voluminous part of the documentation of the War Crimes Commission are records submitted by Member Governments, other National Authorities and Military Tribunals; some 8,000 charge files and related material from Australia to Yugoslavia; periodical lists of about 37,000 War Criminals, Suspects and Witnesses; reports of National Military Tribunals; transcripts of proceedings and documents of the International Military Tribunal for the Far East. Finding Aids in the form of indexes are part of the above enumerated records.

The War Crimes Commission destroyed a part of its records, mostly administrative files, which were considered to be of no historical value. Most documents held by the Research Office, which had been received from government departments in London, were returned to the respective ministries. Records of the following committees did not reach the UN Archives and their whereabouts are not known: Far Eastern Committee of the Main Commission, Public Relations Committee, Finance Committee, Executive Committee, Legal Publications Committee and two sub-committees of the Far Eastern and Pacific Sub-Commission.

Even though the documents of the Commission and its Committees, per se, constitute only a small part of the total size of this archives group, they provide insight into the organizational structure of the Commission and its many and varied activities. A prominent example, documented in 15 volumes, are the Law Reports of Trials of War Criminals which contain summaries of the trials and a comment on each case prepared by the UNWCC Secretariat. The constitutional and working relationship between the War Crimes Commission and the UN Secretariat, especially in the fields of human rights and codification and development of international law, is also documented in two small registry files (RAG-l/Boxes 62 and 95). Mimeographed documents (C 201-C 226, May-September 1946) are contained in a file of the Legal Office (DAG-3/Box 18, "C.A. Stavropoulos papers").

Related to the records of the War Crimes Commission are copies of documents and transcripts of proceedings of the International Military Tribunal and of twelve trials known as the "Subsequent Proceedings" held at Nuremberg from November 1946 to April 1949. These mimeographed reference materials are in the custody of the United Nations Library.
Revised Rules for Access to Records of the United Nations War Crimes Commission

1. Subject to the following restrictions and to normal administrative controls, all archives of the UNWCC are available to any person who appears, to the satisfaction of the Chief of the Archives Section, to be engaged in serious research in the history of the Commission or in related problems in international law or associated fields.

2. The following records are not available for inspection and use except as specified in rule 3 below:

(a) Those parts of the minutes and documents of the Commission and its Committees and of the Research Office "Documents" that refer to specified individuals charged or suspected of war crimes.

(b) The list of war criminals, suspects and witnesses, and related indexes, and the formal charges and related papers.

3. The records described in rule 2 above include unsubstantiated information and hearsay evidence which may not have been submitted to judicial process. Access to these records will nevertheless be granted, on the conditions described below, for the purposes of:

(a) official research into and investigation and prosecution of war crimes by Governments, and

(b) bona fide research by individuals into the history and work of the UNWCC and into war crimes, on the understanding that, in granting access, the United Nations Secretariat is acting in a purely administrative capacity under these rules and it in no way engages the responsibility of the United Nations.

(a) Official research into and investigation and prosecution of war crimes by Governments.

States requesting access for these reasons should address a written request to the Secretary-General of the United Nations specifying (i) the purpose for which information is requested and (ii), where information is sought on individuals, the names of any persons on whom information is sought. It is understood that, where information is sought on individuals, the rules of the State concerned regarding protection of materials in criminal investigations will be applied to the materials made available by the Secretariat from the UNWCC records. Where copies of materials are requested by a Government, a fee will be charged to cover the costs of reproducing the materials requested.

(b) Bona fide research by individuals into the history and work of the UNWCC and into war crimes.

(i) An application for access by an individual will be accepted by the Secretary-General when it is transmitted on the approved form, pursuant to such rules as the Government concerned may prescribe, by the Permanent Representative or Permanent Observer of the State of which the applicant is a national or permanent resident. An application, when submitted to the Government concerned, should be accompanied by an appropriate introduction from an institution of higher learning or research or from a relevant professional society. When considering whether to transmit an application, the Government concerned will pay due regard to the nature of the materials involved and the use to which such materials may be put.

(ii) The approved form may be obtained from the Chief Archivist of the United Nations. The form requires the applicant to give undertakings to observe the terms on which access is granted, and provides that payment of fees, as from time to time established, will be required to cover the administrative costs and services involved.

Note:

These formal charges of Member Governments and related material usually consist of a 4-page form and supporting documentation which provide the following information: registered number; date of receipt in the UNWCC Secretariat; charge number of the accusing government; name(s) of accused; military rank and unit, or name or other official position; date and place of alleged crime; number and description of crime in war crime list; summary statement of facts; particulars of alleged crime and supporting evidence; notes on the case in regard to the culpability of the accused and completeness of the case; and names of persons transmitting the information. Often there are statements by victims or witnesses in support of the charge, or references to published sources. In addition, the file cover indicates the date on which the case was submitted to the Secretariat and decisions of Committee I as to whether it was an "A", "C", "S" or "W" case (see explanatory note under PAG-3/1.1.0.).

Cases apply to either one or several accused. The files are arranged by Member Governments (Countries) making the charge and numerically, according to UNWCC registered number.

Indictment against the 28 Japanese defendants
The 55 counts against them are grouped into 3 categories:
"Crimes against peace";
"Crimes of murder and conspiracy to murder";
"Conventional war crimes and crimes against humanity".

Five Appendices supply particulars of the counts of the indictment, and the treaties and official assurances violated by Japan, plus the names and careers of the defendants.

Notes:

Chapters I - III of the mimeographed Judgment explain the establishment of the Tribunal, justify its jurisdiction and cite the national agreements binding on Japan since 1905. Chapters IV - VIII describe the dominance of the Japanese military and its preparation for war, aggression against China, Exploitation of Manchuria, the Pacific War, and conventional war crimes. Chapters IX - X give the findings on Counts of the Indictment and the Verdicts. The annexes contain documents pertinent to the close of the war, the establishment of the Tribunal and the Indictment as well as the concurring and dissenting opinions of the Judges.
